Monitoring, Evaluation & Research (MER)

RAHIM YAAR KHAN-PUNJAB | RESEARCH | AGRIBUSINESS | ENTERPRISE DEVELOPMENT | ORGANIC FARMING

December 21, 2021

Sindh Rural Support Organization Head Office Team has paid a visit to different agri business agriculture Farms for learning purposes and to gain knowledge at Rahim Yaar Khan Punjab. The team was comprised of Senior Manager MER- Naveed Ishaque Memon, NRM Manager- Ali Asghar Maitlo, and AM MER PPRP Naimatullah Sawand. The team paid visited different locations at Rahim Yaar Khan: Mao Mubarak-Chak Iqbal Agriculture Farm, Zulqurnanin Organic Farm, and Farukh Agri-Tunnel Farm. The main purpose of this visit was to compare mean differences in the productivity and profitability of organic and conventional farms that grow these crops based on new agricultural methods of control shed/Tunnel structure. From the visits and discussion and response, we find that growing organic crops is at least as profitable as conventional crops because of lower input costs and higher output prices. Overall, per hectare, input costs are 20% and 10% lower in organic Tomato and cucumber farms relative to their conventional counterparts. These lower costs, however, are likely to be related to the lower yields associated with organic farms. Indeed for organic farming, need organic manure (Dung of animals) and control of the atmosphere for farming of fertile land. The Agri-entrepreneurs told that organic farming fulfills the nutrients such as Potassium, Phosphorous, and Nitrogen are significantly higher in organic fields relative to conventional fields. Thus, organic farms tend to better conserve soil fertility and system stability than conventional farms. Based on these benefits, they argue that organic agriculture should be encouraged through reductions in subsidies for conventional farming and more careful zoning and market development.

The team also visited the Tunnel Farms structure (Lower and High (Walking) Tunnel), the owner of the Tunnel farm Mr. Akbar briefed us that a Tunnel farm for off-season vegetables is more profitable Because of the controlled atmosphere. Tunnel farming is the source of higher yields and earlier production, and these earlier and quality products give good profits to farmers. For this reason, modern and progressive farmers of Pakistan are adopting this advanced mode of farming at a faster pace because of market-driven requirements especially of vegetable farming (off-season) to fulfill the vegetable market and hotels/restaurants/supermarkets.

SRSO Team also paid field visits to Organic and Tunnel farms. The Owners were briefed at the field level also regarding technical things required for such type of farming and how they are treated. In last the detailed questions and answers discussion was carried out and also asked guidance for visiting the SRSO community agri-business for technical guidance. Team also paid thanks to all for providing such an opportunity and time.

SRSO Team members visited farmer (Mohammad Akbar Raza) who is successful in off seasonal vegetable's farming through best use of Tunnel farming.
